The Heritage Foundation of Newfoundland and Labrador presents...

A Workshop on Adapting NL's Historic Religious Places October 26, 2017 (afternoon) - Cochrane Centre, 81 Cochrane Street

Churches and religious organizations today are facing significant challenges to maintain their historic buildings in the face of declining congregations and volunteer bases and the costs of operating and maintaining often large, ornate buildings. An increasing number of churches are being closed and sold and even demolished, sometimes resulting in conflict within the community. This half day session will provide useful information and tools to religious organizations on the management of historic ecclesiastical buildings.

Who will be interested in this forum:

- Congregational and parish councils, religious orders and clergy responsible for managing historic church buildings
- Church conference and diocesan officials
- Congregational and parish members interested in preserving their historic churches

Please feel free to pass this notice along to interested parties.

St. Peter's History Did you know? The 1960's—A Period of Rapid Growth

The 1960's marked a period of growth that would start talks of dividing the Parish of Foxtrap. In 1960, the Reverend Everett Hobbs was appointed as an assistant to the Reverend Mark Genge, and a parish council was formed. In 1962 a furnace was installed in St. Pater's Church at a cost of $2,800. In 1961 the church received a set of wrought iron church yard gates, a gift from Jessie Coates, an Upper Gullies native who had trained as a nurse and settled in Boston. In 1963, the Kelligrews rectory was built. The Reverend Mark Genge was succeeded by the Reverend David Genge (his brother) in 1965, and during the subsequent five year period the parish contributed $24,000 towards the construction of Queen's College. In 1968, under the direction of the Reverend Benjamin Burry, a Parish Visitation Committee was formed. It's 35 members would visit the sick, the aged, and patients in welfare community care homes, and at monthly meetings would discuss ways of extending pastoral care to the suffering. In October 1968 the new cemetery ground at St. Peter's was consecrated by Bishop Seaborn, and a committee was formed to consider plans for a perpetual care fund.

By the time the Reverend David Genge was succeeded by Reverend Emmanuel Willis in 1970, it was widely acknowledged that the parish was becoming too large for one administration. The new parish of Upper Gullies was formed in 1976 and the Reverend F. R. Rowsell was appointed its first rector. The new parish included the communities of Upper Kelligrews, Upper and Lower Gullies, Seal Cove and Holyrood. In the year of its formation a new rectory was completed at Upper Gullies on the Cameron Estate, a property bequeathed to St. Peter's Church by Jessie Cameron.
